Top Bananas Progress Monitoring

In my classroom, as an extra incentive to learn their letters and reach TOP BANANA status, students will get to put a Banana with their name on it on the Top Banana tree. Of course, this is completely up to you to do or not. You can also sign a magnet on the back of the box so that the pdf version can be used.

I like to use those little Target $1.00 charts but you don't have to use this. Any flat surface, even the floor will do.

KEY VINES
Laminate and cut the monkey vine. Hang from your ceiling. Students pin a clothesline to the large or sorting by lowercase initial letters in me and not, or short letters.

LETTER SLAP/TOSS
You can use a flyswatter on a table for students to cover quickly or place the circles on the floor and have students toss beanbags on them as the letter is called out.

Hey Batter, Batter
I use a pocket chart from Target for this game. Hide the batter and students have to guess the card where he is hiding.

The first set of large balls are use for:

Ringed sets. I have a peg board where students can grab their level of ball words whenever we have rest, reading or inside recess. These are used daily in my class. You'll want to make several sets so that more than one student can be working on them at a time.

As ball words are mastered introduced and mastered by the class, we add them to our word wall. When my students are writing I often hear them say, 'oh said, that's a baseball word. I can look on the word wall to find out how to spell it.'
